For many of us who have only heard of these senseless and tragic deaths through media stories and don't personally know any of the men murdered or their families, the videos for the Chastain brothers were obviously put together with great love and honor. It is obvious through the videos that both Mark and Billy were raised with a large, close family filled with a strong family bond. They then both seemed to be loving partners and fathers as adults, very proud of their own families. While your families' loss is unspeakably tragic, the public and sensational aspect of it brings another layer of pain to your already devastated families through blaming the victims. Please know that there are far more of us out there that have great compassion for your suffering. Thank you for putting videos together that allow us to see the real lives of these men and get to know them more than because of their terrible deaths. We weep with you and our hearts break, alongside yours.
