Dad, although I wish things could've been different, I love you through it all. Those who really knew us, knew we were powerless over the alcohol and the hold it had on you. It ripped our lives apart and caused you to hurt the ones you loved. You managed to overcome that demon and in the end a new one took hold called Alzheimer's. The times spent with you between the drinking and the memory loss allowed me to know you and see you as a person, a human being with a heart and feelings, and as my Dad. I thank God for those moments that we got to share. I will miss you and will hold you in my heart forever.
