I loved old Larry, he was like a brother to me. He was always there when I was growing up. I used to live with them sometimes and stay during the summers, and he always made me feel like I was home. He and i got along great, sometimes he might scold me for something, then 10 minutes later take my side when I would have a disagreement with Nadine or one of the kids. I loved to wear his long sleeved shirts when I would go out and he would always say something like "this is the last time" but I kept asking and he would always give in. He could be so funny, and I will never forget the "tea" incident, where he sat and stirred his peanut butter for about 10 minutes before he realized it was tea, and not syrup. I laughed until I fell out of my chair. Years later he would ask "do you remember the tea? I always told him, I will never for get it. He could make me laugh, and I could make him laugh. He was a good guy, and I know he will be missed, my condolences to all of you, God Bless and I love you all!!!
