It was exactly 3 months ago tonight that you put your hand on my arm and said "I'm your wife." Those were the sweetest words ever spoken to me and I will remember them forever. Although we never walked the aisle, never said "I do" in front of the preacher, and never placed rings on each other's fingers, we were husband and wife. I will always remember when we talked about being married in our hearts, and how you shyed away from the idea of a formal wedding. I just wish we had more time together. As for now I can truly say that the saddest 6 months of my life were also the happiest 6 months of my life. I still have a very difficult time coping with losing you, I still dream of you very often. People keep telling me it gets easier with time, I don't know if I have that much time left. I miss you so much Robin, I can hardly wait to meet you in heaven.

Robin, you have been gone just over 6 weeks now, still feels like yesterday. I am so lost and heartbroken without you. I know the pain will ease with time, but time seems to be dragging by so slowly. I loved you with all my heart and soul. Now it feels both have been ripped away from me. Some days it is all I can do to function. Robin I ask that you walk with me through my daily tribulations, hold me up when I am weary, and touch my heart when I miss you the most.

If our love could have kept you alive you would have lived forever. If our story ends in Heaven I'm anxiously awaiting the curtain. I miss you Robin, I always will.
