“ Although I didn't know Shirley well, my mother (Freda Campbell) did, and she thought the world of her. In her later years, Mother's arthritis prevented her from doing the needlework she loved, and she was delighted when Shirley offered to finish up a quilt Mother had started years earlier. This quilt had fabric pieces from Mother's childhood, and she treasured it not only for its obvious sentimental significance, but also because it represented her friendship with Shirley.##imported-begin##Donna Parsons##imported-end##
